

The Foundation FORMIT is a multinational research and study body based in Roma, Italy. Our areas of expertise are related to

- e-Government services
- integrated processes between administrations
- e-Government scenarios
- Technology research and technology regulation.

We have an extended experience in researching and designing innovative, communications-based e-Government processes, in evaluating their set-up and impacts on Governmental activities and services, taking account of institutional, organisational, technological and regulatory issues.

In the recent past we have advised the European Commission on

- trends and issues for general interest services
- legal issues for electronic e-Government transactions, and in particular for electronic signature use
- organizational, technical and regulatory feasibility study on the Aeronautical Telecommunications Network which included functionalities related to satellite navigation.

We are very interested in participating in the Galileo JU call expiring on 24 February 2006 and particularly in

- a) call number 8069, concerned with paving the way towards the introduction of PRS into its User Communities
- b) and call number 8070 on education, research and innovation in the field of GNSS.

Our request concerns therefore the possibility to join an already established consortium to bring in our contribution to the research work.
